Has anyone ever given you the opportunity to do something life-changing?

This coming year, we will invest funds, training, coaching, and mentorship to jump-start or enrich the emerging ministries of over thirty outstanding leaders all across the country as a part of the 1001 New Worshiping Communities Apprenticeships and Residencies Program.

Taylor Telford is one of those leaders. Read her story below about what it has been like to be a part of this year’s 1001 Residency at Broad Street Ministry and the Beacon Church—both in Philadelphia.

Thanks to her mentors Andy Greenhow, Karen Rohrer, and Becca Blake—who share their expertise in the movement—and many of you—we are able to train and equip more and more leaders to start faithful and fruitful new worshiping communities this year—and in the years to come.

Partnership. That’s what makes this movement thrive. Thanks to a network of coaches, mentors, community leaders, and partnering organizations, the 1001 New Worshiping Communities movement is growing every day. And the communities in which they serve are growing in the likeness of God’s kingdom.

Let us know if you’d like to partner to further this work.

In Christ,
Sara Hayden

Applications are now being accepted for our 1001 apprenticeships and residency programs for 2016–17. Click on the tap ‘Apprenticeships’ for more information at OneThousandOne.org.

Current 1001 resident Taylor Telford sees “God making all things new” as she watches a ten-year-old neighborhood child holding up two halves of toy bread—and repeating the communion liturgy. MORE.
